Description

The Great Bear is apparently composed of seven stars. However one of them is double. We may say that this constellation is made of eight not necessarily distinct stars. Mathematically, we define a constellation of order n as a set of n not necessarily distinct points on a manifold M . From a physical point of view, a pure state of spin s is shown to be a constellation of order $2s$ on the sphere S , as proved by Majorana. If the $2s$ points lie on a diameter, the corresponding state is invariant under a rotation around the diameter. There are $2s + 1$ ways of putting the $2s$ points on a diameter. They correspond to the eight states of the angular momentum along the diameter. Mathematically, constellations are objects which have something to do with projective representations of classical groups. Moreover the notion of harmonically conjugate set of points on the sphere is shown to be more simple if we use constellations instead of set of points and harmonically conjugate constellations is defined whatever their order is...
